right to any voice in the management of their own affairs. It is therefore no the fact that the first essay at responsible government has not given that unthey could have desired, and seiz s upon the fact to trumpet its own preises and prophecy all manner of evil things as the natural consequence of the change from a cone man system of government to the more enlightened one of popular and responsible institutions. We see very Scarion over the fact that the operations of the present Government and the labors of the Legislative Assembly have not riven unbounded satisfaction to everybody; 1. would be much more remarka-ble if they did. It is under ably true that the Government did not come up to what was generally expected of them—that their administration of the office of the country was in many respects sadly deficient and at variance with the fundamental principles of the new system that the degree of conomy did not characterize their proceedings to the conduct of public affairs, which many deemed desirable; and that the Legislature manifested a degree of sub serviency to the Government during the Thursday, May 23rd ession: fully as great as anything tha had been previously witnessed under the old regime. But there is this difference between the two systems : Under the old system public opinion was completely ignored—the people had no voice either in raising or expending the public rev-enurs : they were governed by au oligarchy over whom they had no control, and who treated with silent contempt their most urgent solicitations for the adoption of measures having a tendency to develop the latest resources of the country. Under the new system the
